

TWO COUNTY TOWNS BAN NICKEL MARBLE GAMES

By "BRICK" GAINES
If your city doesn't like marble machines, what can it do? Laguna Beach and Fullerton got rid of them. A survey by The Journal today revealed this and other pertinent facts about the nickel-eating devices.

City officials at Fullerton and Laguna Beach adopted ordinances barring slot machines, nickel machines, punchboards and all the other host of nickel-grabbing devices. The machines disappeared. In other communities the alleged skill games flourish and their owners reap the income. Some towns control them partially by ordinance or by vigilant police action.

The legal situation is this: District Attorney W. F. Menton ruled in effect that the machines are legal if the winnings entitle the players only to free games. If the winnings are pocketed, the proprietor of the place is liable to arrest. This ruling has raised the question of advisability of licensing the devices for municipal revenue.

Fullerton apparently handled the situation without difficulty. "The marble game situation became so serious here, with children stealing nickels from their parents, drawn by the lure of the devices, that we were forced to run them out of town," Chief of Police J. M. Pearson of Fullerton said today.

Charges that removal of the games would not be countenanced by merchants, because they were "paying their rent" with the machines, were made by several officials, interviewed today. "I know of several business men who would be forced to close their doors if it weren't for these devices," one official added.

In contrast to this statement, Chief Pearson said that business in Fullerton was affected very little, if any, when merchants were given two days to remove the machines. "Some of the business men kicked about it," Chief Pearson said, "but we haven't had any games since, at least, any that we can find."

IN ORANGE, long known as the conservative town of the county, the machines flourish in many business establishments. Although the Orange city council never has taken steps to control the games, a sort of "gentlemen's agreement" is in force between the city and merchants. Police warned operators of the games that, if children were found playing the devices, officials would "crack down."

"When the machines were first installed," Chief of Police George Franzen said today, "we had some trouble. Youngsters would be sent to the store for groceries and instead would spend their nickels on the games. We had a wave of petty thievery, where purses were stolen from cars and other losses reported, and finally discovered that boys were stealing to obtain money to play the marble boards and other games."

AT ONE time, the city of Anaheim barred the machines. Store proprietors were warned to remove them and the police department enforced the ruling for some time. Recently, the council rescinded that action, and allowed one game for each place of business.

The council, however, did bar "grab" games and slot machines. "The games should be thrown out all over the county," Chief of Police Jim Bouldin said today in discussing the problem. He esti-

Rebels, Sure of Victory, Push on Toward Madrid

SURRENDER IS DEBATED AT CAPITAL

Spanish Fascists Now
But 18 Miles From Their Goal

By the Associated Press
Insurgent armies, sensing they were on the verge of a decisive victory in the Spanish civil war, stormed the roads to Madrid and Toledo today.

The column advancing toward Toledo was reported to have penetrated within a few miles of the government-held city in a desperate effort to save the survivors of the besieged Alcazar.

18 Miles From Capital
Pressing along the highway to Madrid, the Fascist forces of General Francisco Franco drew battle lines for an attack on Naval-Carnero, only about 18 miles from the capital.

Confident leaders at Talavera de la Reina, Fascist headquarters, predicted capture of Madrid and Toledo was imminent.

Officers said the government forces, despite reinforcements pouring out of Madrid to repulse the steady advance along the highway, were being hurled back.

Surrender Hinted
Reports were current in insurgent quarters the Madrid government was debating the advisability of surrender. The insurgent station at Seville said President Manuel Azana wanted to yield, but Premier Francisco Largo Caballero was opposing him, insisting resistance was still possible.

Tired government militiamen, with only grapes and watermelons for food, tried to hold the road to Madrid. "Torrijos" fell yesterday to the Fascists and their Moorish spearhead.

Bilbao Attack Near
The northern insurgent armies, intent on Bilbao, assaulted government lines 20 miles east of the Biscay Bay seaport.

The government announced its armies had "annihilated" an insurgent column of 4000 men in the Somosierra region of the Guadarrama mountains.

Persistent rumors that the ruined, insurgent-held Alcazar at Toledo had fallen to government attackers were heard in usually well-informed quarters today.

Reporter Explores New KVOE Home

By FRANK ORR

Bearded radio announcers! Hollow-eyed, whiskered fellows scurried around last night in a little white building at the Willowick Golf club. There was a tangle of wires and a scattering of cigaret stubs. A slab of biscuits sat in a box in a corner.

It was KVOE. And everybody was busy moving. They'd been busy—24 hours a day—moving since last Friday; and the job was almost done. They expected to be on the air Thursday. But what a place John Q. Public will see when they let him in! Inside those stucco walls are thousands of dollars worth of radio equipment. Knotty pine and insulating board rise above soft carpets. Here and there a microphone pops up. The whole setup compares favorably with any radio station in the West.

But let's get into the thing properly. Personally conducted tour, and things. To get there—better not yet, because although KVOE will be broadcasting, the "welcome" doormat won't be out for 30 days or so because there's lots of fixing still to be done. You drive out West Fifth street and turn right at the far end of the bridge. And you're there. The building is white stucco, dwarfed by the giant 162-foot radiator aerial mast which sits in the backyard.

We had to come in the window. "We're painting the front door," said the man in the window. (Please Turn to Page 2, Col. 4)

WALNUTS HIT HIGH MARK

Price Increased By Cent
And a Half; County's Crop Smaller

Higher walnut prices, announced this morning by the California Walnut Growers association, today brought prospects of a prosperous season to Orange county walnut growers.

The association set a basic price of 19 1/2 cents per pound on large sizes bearing the diamond brand, freight paid to eastern destinations. This compares with 18 cents last year. Non-branded walnuts were scaled from 13 1/4 to 16 1/4 cents.

Supplies of almost all other nuts are down and the prices up, reported Carlyle Thorpe, general manager of the association. He expressed belief the walnuts will find ready markets at the higher price, despite a bumper crop estimated at 769,877 bags.

Orange county's crop, however, is estimated at only 60 per cent of last year's, according to A. E. Conner, manager of the Santa Ana Walnut Growers association.

Higher prices, however, should more than offset the smaller crop and give growers a better season than the last, he said. Growers are now in the midst of harvest. Plants for sorting, branding, and packing the nuts will commence operations about Oct. 1.

For points on the Pacific Coast and a few mountain states the association did not announce prices. Considering supplies of last season's nuts still held in markets, and application of surplus diversion measures, the association estimated a domestic supply of slightly more than 600,000 bags. Last year 559,300 bags were consumed in the domestic markets.

Operation Saves Babe From 'Mercy Death'

CHICAGO (AP)—Blue-eyed baby Tafel, oblivious to the tumult he caused during his six days of life, rested today in a hospital holding what physicians termed an even chance to survive an operation designed to save him from death by starvation.

The operation to correct an intestinal malformation—a "bottomless colon"—was performed after a dramatic agreement between his mother, Eva, 22, and his father, Julian, 24, a garage mechanic.

Until late yesterday Tafel, fearing Julian, Jr., faced a life of invalidism in the ever of his survival, urged a "mercy death" while the mother pleaded for the child's life regardless of consequences.

After conferring with friends and his spiritual advisor, Tafel gave his decision. The appearance at the hospital of Richard Leffer, a healthy 4-year-old boy who had successfully undergone an identical operation, was the clinching argument. Today baby Tafel was fed at frequent intervals with an eye dropper. Attendants said he came through the operation, performed by five surgeons, in good condition.

An incision was made in the infant's side, about an inch above the hip, through which was inserted a drain into the loop of the intestine to provide an artificial outlet. Further surgery several weeks hence will be necessary to connect the end of the colon with the natural outlet, physicians said.

Dr. Lewis K. Eastman, who performed the 17-minute operation with four assistants gave the baby a "50-50" chance to survive. Certain death from starvation faced the infant prior to the operation, he said. Dr. Eastman expressed the view the baby would not be permanently bed-ridden.

Tafel said he agreed to the surgery "to make my wife feel better." He said the operation must restore the child to health, not merely save his life, to be proven justifiable.

Certain of Job

Harry W. Colmery (above), Topeka, Kan., lawyer, was certain of his election tomorrow as the new national commander of the American Legion. His opponent, Quimby Melton of Georgia, conceded Colmery the victory on the claim of Colmery's headquarters to 943 pledged votes, with only 663 required to elect.

Green Urges Peace

CLEVELAND (AP)—The American Legion selected New York City today for its 1937 convention, heard a plea for a veteran-labor alliance against "foreign entanglements" with European "war activities," and a warning to move cautiously in pressing for new benefits for ex-service men.

Election of Harry W. Colmery, Topeka, Kan., lawyer, as national commander was assured for tomorrow when his only remaining opponent, Quimby Melton, Griffin, Ga., editor, conceded victory to the Topekan.

Claim 943 Votes
Colmery headquarters claimed their candidate was pledged 943 votes, with 663 required to elect. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, urged the Legion today to stand with organized labor against American participation in the "most perilous and distressing situation which exists in Europe."

"We must not become involved in a foreign war in which we have no direct concern," Green told the Legion's 18th convention.

Hines in Warning
"The neutrality legislation already passed by congress must be and should be strengthened so that the guarantees of peace and our nation's insurance against foreign entanglements may be strengthened and maintained."

Gen. Frank T. Hines, U. S. administrator of veterans affairs, told the convention his bureau contemplated no reduction in veterans' benefits, but warned ex-service men to go slowly in seeking additional governmental aid for themselves and their dependents.

Bolsa Chica Interested In Getting White House

REAL CAPITAL URGED FOR COUNTY

Coast Body Committee
Named to Assist in Local Drive

Officials of the Bolsa Chica Gun club are very much interested in establishment of a "Summer White House" on their property between Huntington Beach and Sunset Beach, the president, H. W. Keller, said today.

Contacted by W. H. Gallienne, Huntington Beach, Chamber of Commerce secretary, Keller today expressed interest in the enterprise and asked if the nation's executive would wish to use the gun club headquarters for his summer home, or if new building were anticipated.

Start Action
Informed by Gallienne that a $2,000,000 building project is anticipated by government officials for the summer mansion, Keller immediately arranged a conference on the subject.

As a result, Gallienne and D. E. Barry, chamber president, will (Please Turn to Page 2, Col. 1)

VOTERS URGED TO REGISTER

Register now for the Nov. 3 general election; After tomorrow it will be too late.

County Clerk J. M. Backs issued a final warning to Orange county voters today. Any who have not registered since Jan. 1 or who have changed residence must re-register now to be eligible to cast their votes. Those who wish to change registration must do it now.

Registration for the November election will close tomorrow. Any city clerk in the county will register voters, and special registration deputies are stationed in all communities on downtown streets. It is your duty to vote. Backs will keep his office open in the court house until 9:30 or 10 p. m.

Tango Measure Placed on Ballot

Huntington Beach will vote on its most irking question on Nov. 3. The city was granted permission by the board of supervisors yesterday to add its special city election on the question of Tango games to the November general election ballot.

City Attorney Ray Overacker made the request of the board, stating that Huntington Beach felt it could effect a considerable saving in that way, at no additional expense to the county.

Sons Are Born to Orange Brothers On Same Day

Luck struck double for two brothers in Orange yesterday. They both became fathers of sons.

A nine pound son was born early Tuesday to Mr. and Mrs. Marion Hagerman, at the home of Mrs. Hagerman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Heaton, South Pixley street.

Twelve hours later, at 5 p. m., an eight pound son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hagerman, Jr., at St. Joseph's hospital. Frank and Marion Hagerman are brothers.

Planes Drop 5200 Troops and Heavy Guns by 'Chute in Soviet Mimic Warfare

MOSCOW, (AP)—Clouds of airplanes rained soldiers on the Moscow district today during military maneuvers.

Vast fleets of planes converted the heavens into a veritable flying army for mimic warfare.

In the maneuvers, regarded by Russian army officers as battle tactics of the future, 5200 troops floated to earth on parachutes.

At one time 2200 troops dropped to the earth on parachutes from a fleet of gigantic transports while a convoy of fast pursuit planes raked "enemy" troops on the ground to cover their descent.

In the vanguard of the forces were parachutists equipped with machine-guns who, covered by the pursuit planes, landed and seized the enemy airfield.

In the meantime, from a distance of about 275 miles, the defending forces flew artillery and troops into the battle area. About 3000 men, carrying light field pieces, dropped to the captured "enemy" airfield, and turned their guns on the "enemy's" rear.

Flood Experts to Report Tuesday

First public reports of the board of appraisers setting land valuations preliminary to start of the $13,000,000 Orange county flood control program, will be made to the board of supervisors next Tuesday.

Supervisor N. E. West, Laguna Beach, yesterday demanded that the appraisers make a written and verbal progress report, when he intimated the appraisal needed "speeding up."

West told the board the appraisers had been working six weeks, with no report of progress. This prompted Chairman John Mitchell to explain that a short report had been made some time ago, but that Mitchell had taken it home under the impression other members of the board had seen it.

West then made an appeal for more speed, stating that "if the appraisers can't finish their work by Oct. 15 I'd be in favor of putting on additional men."

The report next Tuesday will be presented by Chairman W. P. Stanton of the board of appraisers. Each member of the board will present a written statement of progress.

The work to be done corresponds to that already under way on projects between Newport and Huntington Beach, and between Huntington Beach and Sunset Beach.

Similar work is under way on Manchester boulevard, where a third lane is being added, shoulders constructed, and gravel sides of the road oiled.

Eight and nine-tenths miles of construction are involved in the Newport-Laguna highway project.

NEW ORLEANS, (AP)—The late Senator Huey P. Long left an estate valued at $153,588.53, including insurance policies payable to his children, an inventory filed today in civil district court showed.

Temperatures today varied from a low of 63 degrees at 7:30 a. m. to a high of 80 degrees at 11:30 a. m., while yesterday's low was 60 degrees at 4 a. m. and high came at 3 p. m. with a total of 82 degrees.

MARTIAL LAW RESULT OF SLAYINGS

Warship Lands Troops to Seek Murderers of
One Marine

(Copyright, 1936, by Associated Press)
SHANGHAI (Thursday)—Japanese blue-jackets, armed for war, held a huge area of Shanghai's International Settlement under martial law early today in a grim search for the gunmen who, a few hours before, had shot three Japanese marines, one of them fatally.

Memories of Shanghai's memorable 1932 siege came back vividly as the reinforced Japanese marines occupied the entire Hongkew area of the settlement, where the shootings occurred, and spread their lines to the creek which cuts through the heart of the foreign area.

Hold One Suspect
(At Tokyo, the naval minister, Admiral Osumi Magano, assumed active command of the fleet upon receipt of the news from Shanghai.)

The Japanese charged the shootings were the work of two Chinese gunmen. One suspect was held, another fled into the maze of dark alleys of the Japanese-populated district.

The two surviving marines, it was announced, probably would recover. But the death of the one brought to five the number of Japanese nationals slain in scattered Sino-Japanese incidents in the last 30 days.

Assume Full Control
The Japanese marines, less than three hours after the shooting, occupied the entire Hongkew area and assumed full control, supplanting the international police. Similar action was taken during the siege of 1932.

Contract for the third unit of Orange county's $1,000,000 highway program for 1936-1937 was awarded today by the state highway department, for $172,186.

The project calls for the addition of a 16-foot third lane on the Coast highway between Newport Beach and Laguna Beach. Work will be done by the George R. Curtin Paving company of Los Angeles.

The work to be done corresponds to that already under way on projects between Newport and Huntington Beach, and between Huntington Beach and Sunset Beach.

Roosevelt vs. Smith!

Never expected to see those two running against each other, did you? But it may happen the night of Oct. 1 when F. D. R. and Al each are scheduled to go on the air in competition for America's attention. Lots of interesting sidelights pop up daily in the presidential campaign. FARM PLEDGE GIVEN IOWA BY LANDON

DES MOINES, Ia. (AP)—Gov. Alf M. Landon stepped personally into Iowa Republican party organization work today after a farm address pledging "a free and independent agriculture."

Cash benefit and conservation payments were endorsed by the presidential candidate last night amid the cheers of an audience at the state fair grounds estimated at from 15,000 to 18,000.

Cheers greeted his declaration that after four years the New Deal was "right back where it started from" and that its conservation plan was "a stop gap and a subterfuge."

Pledges Farm Policy

Landon asserted that in his opinion the New Deal had no farm policy and outlined his pledges for "a settled, workable national policy for agriculture."

The Republican nominee's intensive schedule today called for conferences with party leaders.

He also had an appointment with John P. Wallace and Dan Wallace, uncles of Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, both of whom long have been connected with farm paper publishing.

To Fulfill Obligations

He promised to fulfill all outstanding obligations to the nation's farmers incurred by the present administration and to continue relief checks, drawing applause with the declaration "we will not allow needless suffering in this country—either on our farms or in our cities."

The agricultural program outlined by the Kansas included:

Cash benefits "limited to the production level of the family type farm" and paid upon domestically consumed portions of surplus crops in order to make tariffs effective and to offset foreign commercial policies.

Farm Storage Plan

A farm storage plan "for removing the depressing effect of surpluses" by amending the federal warehousing act so that reserves could be carried on the farm. The farmers, with insurance storage of grain, would be entitled to a warehouse receipt on which he could borrow with any banking agency.

Fuller attention to the question of crop insurance.

More progress in introducing new crops and developing greater domestic demand and different uses.

MORE ABOUT WHITE HOUSE

meet with Keller next Monday to discuss angles of the proposition and possibly arrange to have the site placed before President Roosevelt and planners of the summer carnival.

"A summer White House is small stuff—why not a Washington of the Pacific Coast?"

That, in effect, is the idea of officials of the Orange County Coast association in a letter addressed to members of a committee appointed yesterday by President Elmer Hughes to co-operate with all coast communities in attempting to bring summer headquarters of President Roosevelt and all future presidents to this district.

Offering the thought that other governmental functions could be carried on effectively from an Orange county site, giving workers relief from Eastern summer weather, Coast association leaders urged that committee members investigate the subject from every possible angle and to present the claims of this section of the coast as the "Riviera of America" for the summer headquarters. A real summer capital.

Offer Expected

Named to seek establishment of the White House here were Dan Mulholland, representing San Clemente; D. W. Leyden, Doheny Park; Capt. George Portus, Laguna Beach; Roy Browning, Irvine ranch; Nat H. Neff, Santa Ana; Harry Welch, Newport-Balboa, and D. E. Barry, Huntington Beach.

Interest in the race to present a site for the president's summer home today centered around Laguna Beach, where Chamber of Commerce executives were reported considering several locations in the near vicinity of the artist colony. An offer is expected to be ready for official action by the chamber within a few days, it was reported.

Special Meeting

Awaiting word from Commodore Albert Soland, Orange county booster and Olympic games official, members of the committee will be called for a special meeting within a few days. Newport Harbor officials today were still attempting to contact Commodore Soland, who is now on his way from Germany to New York, and who expects to call upon President Roosevelt before starting for his home at Newport.

LICENSE CHARGE LEAGUE SEATS HITS THREE ETHIOPIANS

City business license complications for the current quarter today had landed three persons in trouble with the police department.

Theodore Dufraim began the parade yesterday when he paid a $35 fine for soliciting photographic work without a license. Today two more persons had been cited.

They are Frank Lansdown, 56, architect, and L. P. Cook, mechanic, of 104 North Main street, who were to appear in city court today.

"After sending them letters and calling on them for payment of the license tax each quarter," explained City Clerk Ed Vegely, "we turn over to police a list of businessmen who have not paid the tax. Then they get warrants and arrest them."

to present Orange county sites for official consideration and seek presidential approval of a location somewhere in the county, it is planned.

Newport officials are still awaiting word from James Irvine, with the possibility suggested that a tract for the proposed White House be offered somewhere between Laguna and Newport Beaches, thus offering a fine climate, easy access to deep water for yachting, ample moorings for government boats at a point midway between San Diego and Los Angeles.

Several other sections are seeking the summer presidential mansion, including San Diego, where a 50-acre site has already been offered; Monterey and Santa Cruz are both reported seeking sites for the establishment, while Santa Barbara is also expected to seek presidential favor for the White House.

OCTOBER TO BE STORMY, SAY RAIN GUESSERS

Batten down the hatches for some stormy weather the first two weeks in October!

That's what the latest batch of guesses in The Journal's weather-predicting contest indicates. Looks like the amateur weather-men are beginning to think of that new Dobbs hat that Swanberger's is donating, and the new umbrella from Rankin's, because the guesses are coming in—and they're all hoping for an early rain.

Mrs. C. A. Fowler of 531 Linwood avenue writes in today to guess the one-inch rain will start at noon on Oct. 15—if that doesn't get her the prize she thinks the wind will begin to blow on Oct. 20—the following Tuesday.

D. M. Jellis, of 1209 Highland, thinks the same way. He says the rain will start on Oct. 15, only he figures it about six hours later—at 6 p. m. The big wind, he claims, is even closer, on Oct. 1. C. J. Flemming, 2414 Bonnie Brae, says the big wind will be along on Oct. 13, but we won't have any rain to speak of until Dec. 12. Mrs. Carrie Sherrill, on the other hand, thinks the big rain will be here Oct. 2. She lives at 602 East Third.

Some aren't too confident of early rainy weather—among them is E. Blake, 705 East Pine, who says the rain will start the third day of December, but that the desert wind isn't due until Feb. 6, 1937.

These are a few—and they may be right or wrong. It doesn't matter. The thing to do is to get in the swim yourself. Tear out a ballot, and send your prediction in to The Journal Contest Editor.

For the one who guesses closest to the day and hour the rain begins, a new umbrella from Rankin's. For the best wind-predictor, a new Dobbs Cross-Country hat from Swanberger's.

FACES NOT WHAT THEY SEEM

When you want to make an impression, be sure to turn the proper side of your face toward the boss.

Because one side of your face probably indicates what genius you may have, and the other is the Mr. Hyde of the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde combination.

This was explained to 20-30 club members last night by William E. Benton of Los Angeles, character analyst and "human engineer."

Benton explained the difference in face sides by use of a "duality mirror," which shows the two sides independent of each other. He illustrated with pictures of O. O. McIntyre and Thomas Edison, explaining "one side of McIntyre's face is humorous and the other is cynical."

No business was transacted last night, but at a closed meeting next Tuesday evening, plans for fall activities will be discussed.

MORE ABOUT KVOE

explained Manager Ernest L. Spencer—into a corner office with a big desk, a receiving set, and some other furniture. There Program Director Wally Wiggins will hold forth.

Main Studio

From there a door leads into the main studio, a long room with a heavily-carpeted floor. Drapes cover glass doors leading into a hallway. Baseboards are knotty pine, backed by invisible sound-absorbing material. Walls and ceiling are of insulating board. The ceiling contains lights—flush with the top so as not to disturb the acoustics—with ventilators around the lights. A pedestal microphone sits alongside a piano, and that's where people perform.

Down at the far end of the studio there's a lighted panel. It reads "on the air" when the studio is broadcasting, which is a signal not to get an attack of hay fever or remark about the blonde in the back row. Because the audience gets "in on" the program properly. It sits in the studio.

Announcer's Booth

Under the light panel is a window—double glass with the outside pane slanting upward to keep sound from being reflected. Through that window you can see the announcer in his booth.

To get to the announcer's booth, you walk down a hallway, past an office for Director Enrique Laurent of the Spanish program, two rest rooms, and a reception room. Then to the right through a small door into an anteroom, where performers may straighten their ties, cough and gulp once before going into the studio.

A small door leads to the announcer's booth. He sits at a wide desk and talks into a microphone of his own, controlling the program by two keys on the desk, which switch the booth and studio microphones on and off. Phonograph turntables flank him, and he plays them alternately on transcribed programs.

Meters and Dials

Off the announcer's booth is the transmitter room, which looks into the studio from another window. There large panels of meters and dials leer out at you, and there are knobs projecting here and there to control different parts of the mechanism. Another desk and turntable permit the engineer to put on a transcribed program and announce from there.

Off the transmitter room is a workshop, where engineers put together the tangled maze of wires that make sense only to technicians but which bring you your radio programs.

In the "backyard" is the aerial mechanism, and, appropriately enough, the "dog house." This is a copper box at the base of the giant mast, containing more meters and dials, to take a last whack at the program and signal to see if it's going on the air properly. Twenty thousand feet of wire run 160 feet in all directions from the base of the mast for a "ground."

Burglar Alarm

Besides all that, there are astounding gadgets everywhere to make the programs better and more convenient. Remote control, automatic loudspeakers, a remote-control lock on the studio door—It could go on and on. But the gadgets will have to wait. They deserve a separate story before long. Just one, though, is especially good:

"Wait'll you see our burglar alarm," said Wiggins. "When we get to the point where the station's left alone at night, anyone

HONEYMOON SPENT IN CAVE But Father 'Rescues' Girl

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP)—The romance with a pre-historic touch of a 14-year-old itinerant girl and the 19-year-old son of tenant farmer parents was ended today—the girl's father supplying a modernistic climax to his daughter's four-day honeymoon in a cave.

The bride, Vera Grimes, who was reluctant to leave the cave, was en route with her father to her home at Cleves, Ohio. Ben Porter, the young husband, one of a family of eight, returned to the two-room dwelling of his parents.

Because of crowded conditions at the Porter house, Deputy Sheriff Boyd Downey said he was told, the couple set up housekeeping in the cave on the Porter farm in which the girl had made her home three weeks before her marriage last Saturday at Gallatin, Tenn.

Officers took Vera into custody yesterday at the request of her father. The girl previously had been detained two weeks ago by officers after they were notified by residents of the Lost River community, south of here, of the cave dweller. She was released four days later after efforts to identify her failed.

A few days after her release, she married young Porter, culminating a whirlwind romance.

Father of Girl Sent to Prison

McKinley T. Turner, 35, of Buena Park, was en route this afternoon for San Quentin state penitentiary for a term of one to 50 years.

He pleaded guilty before Superior Judge G. K. Scovel today to charges of committing a statutory offense against his 10-year-old daughter.

Judge Scovel indicated that Turner would not be eligible for parole until he had spent 15 years in the prison. His attorney was Harry O. Warton of Anaheim, appointed by the court.

Tells How to Avoid Jail Term

If Roy Bennett, Santa Ana carpenter, wants to stay out of the county jail, he must spend at least six months at the veterans' hospital in Sawtelle.

Bennett's six-month sentence on vagrancy charges, Justice Kenneth Morrison today also imposed terms of probation and four months on violated probation orders when Bennett pleaded guilty. He provided that if Bennett goes to the hospital and stays there six months, the balance of the sentence will be set aside.

Breaks Ribs as Car Hits Tree

After his car collided with a tree near the Martin airport on Newport boulevard this morning, William Jones, 39, 1325 French street, was taken to the county hospital for treatment.

Attendants said he incurred three broken ribs, possible fracture of the left foot, and scalp lacerations.

Lester Moore, 33, 1319 East Third street, was treated for cuts and bruises today, incurred as the result of another early-morning collision.

Authorities of the International Settlement immediately called out a Russian company of 600 men, part of the settlement defense corps. They were standing by, ready for instant duty in the event of an emergency.

Japanese authorities stated: "Before the night is over we shall take adequate steps to protect Japanese lives and property in Shanghai."

Numerous foreign hotels, the International Settlement postoffice and other prominent public institutions were within the Japanese-controlled area.

STRIKERS AT SALINAS SET FOR ACTION

SALINAS, (AP)—A strategy committee of six members was named today by three unions to carry on the lettuce workers strike in case Gov. Frank F. Merriam's peace meeting at Sacramento fails to achieve results.

About 100 pickets, half of them women wearing trousers, returned to duty about the packing sheds.

The strategy committee, chosen by ballot, is composed of Michael Shevlin, president of the Fruit and Vegetable Workers' Union, of Salinas, and Frank Meneses, Watsonville; Tom Kenny and George Baily, Salinas, of the Box Makers' Union, and Julius Strobel and John Paden, Salinas, of the Teamsters' Union.

Strobel is a brother of Henry Strobel of the Associated Farmers, who was injured during rioting in early stages of the strike. A. S. Doss, financial secretary of the Fruit and Vegetable Workers' Union, expressed pessimism at the outcome of the Sacramento conference. He pointed out his union was not directly represented at the session and that the state American Federation of Labor cannot make proposals without the union's sanction.

MERRIAM CONFIDENT OF CONCILIATION

SACRAMENTO, (AP)—Confidence in conciliation committees would reach an agreement, perhaps today, in negotiations to settle the Salinas lettuce strike was expressed by Gov. Frank Merriam.

The chief executive said his optimism was based on the "fine cooperation and exceedingly dignified way the committee members have discussed the various problems."

FOOTBALL PREDICTIONS WRESTLERS' TRICHOMA

Baker's Forecaster, New York weekly publication that averaged .913 in prognosticating leading games of the nation last fall, is stringing with the following eleven on Saturday's gridiron: Stanford 14, Santa Clara 7, at Palo Alto. Minnesota 14, Washington 7, at Seattle. U. C. L. A. 21, Occidental 0; and U. C. L. A. 21, Pomona 7, in a doubleheader at Westwood. California 21, College of Pacific 0, at Berkeley. The U. S. C.-Oregon State brawl is not listed by the little green sheet that hit 75 winners out of 830 games in '35.

The Journal's Bob Guild, who feverishly furnishes boxing and wrestling fuel for this department, has come up with some interesting sidelights from the House of Horrors on Highway 101. Sez Bob:

Wherever wrestlers gather the talk turns inevitably to one of two things—doctors in general or trichoma in particular. Trichoma is a nightmare to the men of the padded mat. Sooner or later they all get it—or a variation of it.

Trichoma denies specific analysis, they tell me. It is a granulation of the eye-lids, the infection brought about by the combination of sweat, dust from the mat, and resin. In its worst stages it causes blindness and great agony, and is only cured after much expense and considerable time.

The great Jim Brownling lay in a darkened room for months, nearly was permanently blinded, and spent thousands on expensive medical treatment. The lesser lights suffer the same way. Howard (Hangman) Cantonwine said Monday at the O. C. A. C. that he spends more than $500 yearly on doctor's bills, but then the Hangman is a sufferer from sinus and hay fever. He has had trouble with his eyes three times, was hospitalized each time.

A doctor in Berkeley fixed Howard's eyes, with a simple wash, as compared to the involved and technical treatment usually given.

An old Indian doctor in Montana fixed the Hangman's hay fever, after he had gone to medics the country over in search for relief. "I had been punched so many times with hypodermic needles," he said, "that I fairly leaked when I

Everett Marshall walked. Then this old fellow on or else—and he fixed me."

The Hangman never found out how, he said. It's a secret of the Indians.

Last year he turned in $450 exemption, says he, for doctor bills on his income tax report.

Uncle Sam wrote back: "Anybody who can wrestle 200 times during the year isn't entitled to exemptions for doctor's bills. You didn't have time to be sick."

Dick Davisourt says he has had trichoma twice, each time landing in the hospital, and has spent thousands in his wrestling lifetime looking for a permanent cure.

Once, he says, Everett Marshall (wrestler, too) showed up with a preparation Marshall's sister, a doctor, had prepared. "Great stuff, he told me," says Davisourt, "and he goes on using it three times a day. Inside of a week he was almost blind!"

Steve Streich, on the other hand, claims he never had trouble with his eyes. His solution is to wash his entire head and eyes first—before he showers, and then bathe his eyes in a boric solution. So far he's escaped infection. Tough guy, too—claims he's spent very little on doctor's bills.

Streich in his life-time has been everything from a parachute jumper to a daredevil driver, a circus strong-man and the guy who does what the other fellows afraid to do. He carries the same tactics into the ring—and thinks this game's the toughest.

Murray's Homer Paces Oilers to 8-3 Win

NEVA STRIKES OUT ELEVEN STUBBYS

San Bernardino Victim of Thierry's Triple Play in 9th Frame

Destroying San Bernardino's 3-2 command, with George Murray's homer with two aboard in the fourth, Huntington Beach's National league nightball champions coasted to an 8-3 victory over the American league titleholders in the first game of the Southern California playoff in San Bernardino last night.

A sensational triple play executed by Henry Thierry and Bob Smith, bitter bickering over the balls and strikes called by John Ireland, and the tantalizing change-of-pace of Hurier Louie Neva, who fanned 11, were highlights of the opener, played before 2500 fans at Perris Hill park.

Murray's circuit clout down the third-base line followed Thierry's single and Orv Schuchardt's fielder's choice. This three-run spurge put the Oilers in the lead, 5 to 3, and after the fourth they were never headed.

San Bernardino wilted, 5-3, 7-3 and 8-3 in the latter innings, but forged into the ninth with what had the earmarks of a belated rally. Anderson, centerfielder, walked, and Stock, second-sacker, singled. Then came the Oilers' triple play. Strain smashed a line drive to Second-baseman Thierry, who caught the ball, stepped on second and tossed to Smith at first. Anderson and Stock were left dead in the bases at the crack of the bat, were caught flat-footed.

Catcher Paul Neva, Thierry and Murray led Manager Joe Rodgers' Oilers with two bingles apiece. Huntington Beach plays a second game at San Bernardino tomorrow night before invading the San Joaquin Valley league for exhibitions with Visalia Friday and Saturday. They play at San Bernardino a third time next Tuesday, and then go into their own park against the American leaguers Oct. 2.

Nebraska Eleven Takes Big Six Pre-Season Title

(Fourth in a series of seven daily stories detailing major college football prospects in various sections.)

By WHITNEY MARTIN KANSAS CITY, (AP)—A sprinkling of new coaches, rugged schedules studied with numerous sectional clashes, and the annual cry of "watch Nebraska" share the spotlight this fall in the Missouri valley sectional football preview.

This territory's two major conferences—Big Six and the Missouri valley—include most of the larger schools. In fact, St. Louis university is the only school in the territory rated a stern threat that operates as a football free-lance.

Nebraska, traditionally tops hereabouts and rated among the top-notchers of the nation, will defend its Big Six crown with a team that even the conservative Coach Dana X. Bible admits "looks pretty good."

The Cornhuskers have most of the shining lights of their fine 1935 team, including Lloyd Cardwell, a great halfback, and Sam Francis, 200-pound fullback, who was a member of the American Olympic team as a left-handed shot-putter.

However, Nebraska's banner will be carried into battles with such extra-curricular foes as Minnesota, Pittsburgh, Indiana and Oregon State, so however powerful the Cornhuskers may be, they may not have enough.

Sooner Share Spotlight Just a shade under Nebraska in pre-season ratings comes Oklahoma, where the advent of Maj. Lawrence (Biff) Jones as head tutor last fall started a blaze of football enthusiasm which was reflected in a powerful team. The rugged Biffer lost half of his let-terms, but hopeful Sooners believe Jones will give them another fine eleven. In Bill Breeden, Jones has a crushing back who should write his name in large letters on the football horizon.

Other Big Six schools—Kansas State, Kansas, Iowa State and Missouri—offer a variety of question marks, with Kansas State conceded the best chance. Coach Wesley Fry turned out a fine defensive team at Kansas State last year despite constant visits—of the injury and ineligible jinxes—and he has many capable performers returning including Maurice (Red) Elder, a sturdy fullback, and Leo Ayers, All-Big Six quarterback.

Kansas, always tough but usually not quite tough enough, has a hazy outlook. Most of the 1935 regulars are missing. The situation also is clouded at Missouri. The sprinkling of new coaches was more of a cloudburst in the Missouri valley conference, where four of the seven schools are operating under new head tutors. Ted Cox is introducing a new system at Oklahoma A. & M.; Elmer Holm is directing at Washburn; Guy Lookabaugh is trying to boost little Grinnell into a place in the football limelight, and Vic Hurt has taken Southern Methodist's aerial circus ideas to Tulsa. Creighton, where Marchmont (Notre Dame) Schwartz is making the fans sit up and take notice, is rated the dark horse of the valley loop. Despite the loss of several outstanding men, Schwartz has a squad of 75, many of them veterans.

Although Creighton is rated the team which may come out of nowhere to the title Tulsa is favored to retain at least its share of the championship, which it split with Washington (of St. Louis) last fall.

Washington's chances of retaining its share of the title are rated good. In Bob Huggins, halfback; Dwight Haffel, end, and Irving Londy, guard, Coach Jimmy Gonzelman has a quartet of outstanding men, all all-conference selections.

Creighton employs two teams of huskies who specialize in passes with two sturdy ends, according to Harold Youel, ex-Don center who scouted the Vagueros' 7-6 victory at San Bernardino. Glendale scored as the result of a 46-yard run by Paguet, reserve halfback, late in the first half. Paguet carried the ball to the 11-yard line. San Bernardino was penalized half-way to the goal for pass interference, and Chuck Wells of Glendale went over left guard for a fake reverse for six yards and a touchdown. Paguet kicked the conversion.

There is a strong possibility Dick White, regular fullback of the Saints in '35, will enroll with the Dons.

SAINT RIVALS TO AVERAGE 166 POUNDS

Inglewood Preps Bring Three Vets; Creighton Hunter to Tackle

Inglewood's Sentinels, Bay league eleven coached by Dick Arnett and Art Badenoch, will average 166 pounds in the line and 162 in the backfield for their grid exhibition with Santa Ana's Coast league Saints here Friday afternoon.

Coaches Bill Foote and Reece Greene of the local preps can field a forward wall averaging 170 pounds and a backfield at 165.

Inglewood will start with three veterans—Edward Frank, 175-pound fullback; Harold Nelk, 175-pound center; and C. McComas, 205-pound left tackle. The other regulars are first-year boys.

Failure of Huntington Beach's Oilers to appear because of lack of transportation left Tustin as the only target for the Saints in scrimmage at Poly field yesterday. Bill Cole's Tilters showed up well against Santa Ana's reserves, but were too light to cope with the variety, which concentrated on passes and looked good. Al Patterson, 160-pound halfback, got off some fine aerials and two or three long runs.

Creighton Hunter, who weighs 195 pounds in a football suit, was shifted from center to tackle on the second string to alternate with Ferris Wall. The Saints have two good reserve ends in the making in Jim O'Connell and Jim Johnson, the latter an elongated negro. Herschel Whitney, the track star, has been promoted to second-string left halfback.

Harold Tucker is as good a first-string quarterback right now as his brother Sammy was in '31. Sam, the University of Arizona, did not "find" himself until Bill Cook shifted him to running guard at junior college, where he was a sensation. Little Harold blocks well, and knows how to call plays.

Washington's chances of retaining its share of the title are rated good. In Bob Huggins, halfback; Dwight Haffel, end, and Irving Londy, guard, Coach Jimmy Gonzelman has a quartet of outstanding men, all all-conference selections.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By EDDIE BRIETZ Associated Press Sports Writer PHILADELPHIA. Same old story. Joe Louis just shuffled along until Al Ettore made him mad with a solid right hand smack (Al's best kick of the evening) then turned on what is known as the old heat. Mrs. Ettore was so nervous she wouldn't risk a ring-side seat, but waited for Al in his dressing room. It was a job getting through the negro residential district on the way in from the stadium. Thousands of negroes lined the streets waiting for a peek at Louis. Made you think of the drive through Harlem the night Joe put the skids under Maxie Baer. Some of the Giants attended—incognito after that double lacing by the Phillies yesterday. How those two hurt!

It should interest the Giants to learn the Yankees haven't lost a world's series game since Oct. 10, 1926. That two-hitter Lefty Gomez turned in against Washington may earn him a starting assignment in the world series. Joe McCarthy may even send Lefty against Carl Hubbell in the opener.

Johnny Fischer, the new amateur golf champ, doesn't drink or smoke and hasn't even got a sweetie. Nor does he want one, girls.

They say Larry MacPhail, former general manager of the Reds, is figuring on buying the St. Louis Browns. Question now before the house is how will he get along with Rogers Hornsby? This corner likes Duke over Colgate Saturday and will back it up.

Creighton Hunter, who weighs 195 pounds in a football suit, was shifted from center to tackle on the second string to alternate with Ferris Wall. The Saints have two good reserve ends in the making in Jim O'Connell and Jim Johnson, the latter an elongated negro. Herschel Whitney, the track star, has been promoted to second-string left halfback.

Harold Tucker is as good a first-string quarterback right now as his brother Sammy was in '31. Sam, the University of Arizona, did not "find" himself until Bill Cook shifted him to running guard at junior college, where he was a sensation. Little Harold blocks well, and knows how to call plays.

Washington's chances of retaining its share of the title are rated good. In Bob Huggins, halfback; Dwight Haffel, end, and Irving Londy, guard, Coach Jimmy Gonzelman has a quartet of outstanding men, all all-conference selections.

Brick Dust

Here and There With The Journal's
Rambling County Editor

By I. N. (BRICK) GAINES

SLAVEDRIVER! That's me! City Editor Rich Bradshaw made a promise, and I'm holding him to it. He said that for every "bell-ringer" of a story I'd write for him, he'd write a column for me. Turned in something he considered a "bell-ringer," because he presents me with the following: Hurrah!

Because Brick Gaines wanted to play marbles, I have to write his column today.

Brick scampers all around the county to see how the marble machines are getting along. He has a signed story about it on the front page. And I write his column. He traded an "agate" for a "glassy."

Here's the real marble story: Brick wanted to inspect the marble machines in a little different way. His idea was to take five dollars—not his five dollars—and play the marble games. The plan was to see how long the five dollars would last.

That scheme got thumbs down. Brick wouldn't have got outside Santa Ana. And we never would have known how the marble machines were doing in other parts of the county.

Folks will be coming from all over Orange county to see the Passion Play in the Municipal bowl here tonight—sponsored by the Elks lodge.

There's an angle to that which might be worth while batting about in an Associated Chambers of Commerce session.

What if Orange county had a real outdoor amphitheater—a place where thousands of folks could gather and see outstanding dramatic and musical productions? Without having to sweat through traffic like you have to do in Hollywood.

A think like that would not only make Orange county a center of interest artistically. There would be other benefits, too. Such things help to attract the kind of permanent residents Orange county needs.

The idea isn't mine. It germinated in the mind of Don Meadows of Laguna Beach. He's written and produced a number of outdoor pageants. According to Don there's an ideal site already waiting for such a theater up at Irvine park.

And don't forget that Fullerton already has made a start toward building an outdoor theater at Hillcrest park. Maybe you haven't noticed it, but the ground is all laid out for it. Get Harry May of the Fullerton chamber of commerce to tell you about it, or show it to you.

Orange county didn't do so badly at the Pomona fair and the state fair at Sacramento.

Eleven first prizes at Pomona, and a long string of other ribbons, too, for individual entries. On top of that Dick Tubbs, agricultural commissioner, under whose supervision the fair display was built, announced that the exhibit has more than paid for itself in prize money.

Funny thing about fair exhibits. They're like a good many other things. The best costs the least. In other words, when the county spends enough on a display to make one that's really attractive, it gets a return on its investment, large enough to pay the cost and maybe more.

On the other hand, if some county does the job in a penny-pinching style, the display naturally can't compete with the best. It doesn't win many prizes. And that county is out the cost of the display—with not much return in the form of prize money.

And after all I've done for Brick, too!

Just learned that a lot of movie folks on location are staying at the Santa Ana hotel. Would have been a good news story. Maybe a "bell-ringer." But that's out.

Took a look at Brick's county page and he already had the story in a box. At least it looks like the story—about hiring extras over at Orange.

That's gratitude for you.

Thought for the future: Somebody's going to ride an elephant pretty soon. Sounds screwy, but it's true. Watch The Journal and you'll find out who.

Thanks for the marble game story, Brick!

SEEK HUGE OCEAN PLAYGROUND AT HUNTINGTON BEACH

13,000-FOOT FRONTAGE IN DEAL

Chamber Recommends City or State Action to Acquire Land

HUNTINGTON BEACH.—Possibility of a move for the city of Huntington Beach to acquire 13,000 feet of additional beach frontage was indicated here today with filing of a chamber of commerce report on popularity of the beach during the summer and the need of a larger recreational area for visitors.

The chamber of commerce will recommend that the 13,000-foot strip of frontage be acquired either by the city or state to be used for recreational purposes, it was announced.

Work Out Deal Much of the frontage west of the pleasure pier is owned by the Standard Oil company and the Huntington Beach company, members said today, and efforts to work out a deal with the two organizations are expected to be made so the city can acquire title to the land. About 2000 feet of frontage is also available near the eastern city limits, it was reported.

The chamber of commerce action followed filing of a report on popularity of the beach here today. City life guards, police, the chamber and other organizations have cooperated in compiling estimates of number of visitors during the past summer season. At least 272,000 persons took advantage of recreational facilities, it was estimated.

Camp Is Popular Other figures released by the workers showed that a total of 25,000 persons stayed two days or more in the city trailer camp, while 6000 automobile trailers were registered during the season.

Much larger crowds are expected in the future, it was reported, because of the completion of the new recreation and convention hall, which will start soon. Last spring voters approved expenditure of a $25,000 city surplus for the municipality's share of the construction work.

In 1931 the city acquired 3750 feet of beach frontage east of the municipal pier, and during the past five years about $20,000 has been spent upon improvement of the beach and installation of recreational facilities, not including construction of the pier itself, which cost $350,000. In addition, the city has spent $7500 in developing the trailer camp and tent city.

Erik Magnussen, 'New Cellini,' Walked to Fame as Balboa Artist

By MRS. L. B. SMALLEY Erik Magnussen, who now lives at Balboa, surrounded by his pictures, hitch-hiked to California, that he might become one of the best-known artists in this territory.

Hailed as a "new Cellini," following a dream from Denmark to the Pacific, Magnussen worked from when he was 14 years of age attempting to enter America, finally achieving his desire at 40, after working for Gorham's many years as a silver craftsman to obtain funds for the trip.

He arrived in New York, and walked the streets looking in jeweler's windows. He considered their designs for silverware terrible, and wrote to Gorham of his dislike for American design, and was immediately financed with a stop of his own in Chicago, where he also studied art and English, as well as teaching a branch of crafts at the Art Institute.

Then the depression struck, and Magnussen took a bus for Kansas City, where a mechanical exposition was in progress. Still har-

HOUSE-PARTY MURDER

Harriet Blanes, wealthy old invalid, is murdered in her bed in her isolated country house. In the house, aside from her, are her niece and nephew, Joan and Ricky Blanes; four week-end guests, Rodney Maines, Stephen Carter, William Grove and Timothy. As a blizzard has cut them off from the outside world, they are forced to take things into their own hands. A $100,000 necklace is missing. Then Ricky is murdered, and the necklace is found in his room. It is put in the safe, but is again stolen. Timothy reveals that Ruth Andrews is a private detective and suggests that she conduct an investigation. When she questions the cook about some men, the gardener announces he can explain the gloves.

CHAPTER XXX Everyone except Timothy was surprised by John's sudden interruption. Even Ruth looked puzzled, but Timothy seemed to take it as quite natural.

"At last," he murmured, "you've decided to speak. Well, John, where did you find the gloves?"

"In a corner of the backstairs landing near the corridor door," the gardener answered sullenly. "On the morning after Miss Blanes' murder."

"And then?"

"I heard someone coming, and I stuck 'em in a bundle of dirty clothes in the washroom hamper. I meant to come back and get 'em later."

"This was about what time?"

"Seven o'clock in the morning." "The dirty clothes belonged to a Cook," William murmured.

"Why didn't you tell us this before?" Ruth demanded of the gardener.

"Why should I? Nobody asked me."

"It wasn't because you thought they belonged to Mr. Richard?" Timothy shot at him.

"What makes you think that?"

"Many thanks," Timothy grinned, "for answering my question."

The gardener clenched his fists and scowled at the floor.

"All right," he grunted at last, "you've got me there."

"Why should you want to defend Mr. Richard?"

"He done me a good turn when I was down and out. Got me this job."

"And John never forgets," murmured Timothy, "even when it makes him an accomplice to murder. Come on, man, tell the truth."

"There ain't nothing else to tell."

"No?" Timothy's voice was very hard. "Then I'll tell a story very easy to prove, that will land you in prison."

"You're just trying to scare me," the gardener growled.

"The first thing you'll find pretty hard to explain," Timothy said slowly, "is what you were doing upstairs yesterday afternoon and again when we were at dinner."

"I told you I wanted to look at the missus."

"That wouldn't even convince a child," Timothy said scornfully, "and you can't use the same excuse twice."

"Oh, yes, you were. I saw you hiding in Mr. Richard's room the second time."

Silence.

"All right," said Timothy quietly. "If you won't speak, I'll tell you why you were anxious to defend Mr. Richard—because he had something on you."

"Why ask me, if you know everything?"

Joan had the impression that Timothy was striking out in the dark, but he had made a lucky hit. John was worried. He kept shifting his weight from one foot to the other.

"I just want to know the minor details," Timothy went on smoothly. "The rest is plain. You and Mr. Richard were working together to steal the necklace."

"Timothy's tone was successful, for John suddenly broke down. 'No!' he cried. 'Honest, mister, I don't know nothing about the necklace.'"

"All right," said Timothy quietly, "tell us the truth then."

The gardener mopped his face and drew a long breath.

"Mr. Richard got me this job. I hadn't been lucky and—well, it was hard to get work."

"Been in prison?"

"Framed," he muttered. "They all say that." William smiled sarcastically.

"Anyhow," John went on with difficulty, "nobody'd give me a job. I was down and out, nothing to eat, and one night I pinched a gent's pocketbook. Mr. Richard caught me at it and—well, he said, 'would I said no, just wanted to get even with somebody and, if I'd help him, he'd pay me good.'"

"And you jumped at the chance," William said ironically, "quite sure everything was so, so innocent."

"Of course, I thought it was funny," the gardener growled, "but if I didn't accept, I was afraid he'd send me back to jail. Anyway, it seemed pretty soft in the beginning. Then, when the old missus was done in, I got kind of scared and wanted to get out."

"The first thing you'll find pretty hard to explain," Timothy about the gloves, but he said he was innocent and I didn't know him, he'd put me in a tight spot."

"What did he ask you to do?"

"Help him fix up that beam outside his door. He said someone was going to get after him next, and he wanted a nice little trap. That's what we'd been doing when that fellow—he nodded toward Rodney—came out of his room, and Mr. Richard pitched onto me so he wouldn't think we'd been together."

"Do you mean to say you carted that beam up there, and I didn't know it was by yourself?"

"Yes, and I'll do it again if you don't believe me."

"But if someone had seen you?"

"Mr. Richard was looking out."

"And when we were at dinner last night?"

"I went up there to hitch up the wire."

"And then, later, you turned out the lights?"

"Yes."

Ruth looked around. "Has any one any other question to ask?"

"Let them go, as far as I'm concerned," William said wearily.

Timothy nodded, and the servants filed out, obviously relieved. When they had gone, Stephen asked doubtfully:

"Do you all believe that story of the gardener's?"

"I do, for one," Timothy answered, "except for the part about the necklace. I think he knew darn well what Ricky was up to."

"But why should Ricky want an accomplice?" Stephen insisted.

"Not an accomplice, perhaps," Timothy said. "He probably saw a good chance of having one person in the house who would back him up in case of need."

"Reilly," William asked suddenly, "do you believe that Ricky and his aunt were killed by the same person?"

"Yes."

"But why such a neat murder, and then such a messy one?"

"I think," said Timothy quietly, "that if Ricky hadn't expected an attack and fought for his life, he would have been murdered in the same neat way."

"I don't understand," Stephen protested, puzzled.

"You would if you examined Ricky's wounds."

"Made by a very sharp, narrow instrument," William murmured. "Yes, I see your point. A surgical instrument, for example?"

Timothy nodded. "Quite possibly."

"Then I should like to know," William said coolly, "who there is in this house experienced enough in anatomy to strike exactly the vital spot? And who would possess a sharp, narrow instrument quite probably a surgical knife?"

SEEK REASON FOR SCHOOL DECREASE

Survey Shows Decline in Enrollment of White
American Pupils

Are Mexicans displacing American whites in Santa Ana because of a higher birth rate?

That was the question before Herman I. Ranney, city school attendance supervisor, today as enrollment figures in elementary schools showed 17 more Mexican children than last year and 89 fewer American white children.

There was a net loss of 66 in elementary enrollment in the city's 14 schools.

To Make Survey
Since a recent survey showed practically every house and apartment in the city occupied, it was considered unlikely that a decrease in population accounted for the lower enrollment. Ranney said today he will make a survey soon of the enrollment by grades to seek the cause.

Records showed a drop of 101 in junior high school enrollment and an increase of 106 in high school enrollment. This is largely because of abandonment of mid-year graduations, according to school authorities. Many who would have remained in junior high school until midyear have entered high school at this time.

Figures Listed
Junior college enrollment today was one more than the enrollment last year, standing 673 as compared with 672 last year.

Following are today's enrollment figures, followed by enrollment at this time last year:

Elementary schools, 3140, 3212; junior high school, 1389, 1490; high school, 1284, 1178; junior college, 673, 672.

U. S. DIPLOMAT IS STABBED

TOKYO, (AP)—Erle R. Dickover, first secretary and charge d'affaires of the United States embassy, was stabbed in his home today by a burglar who escaped.

The invader went first to Mrs. Dickover's room while the household was asleep during the early hours. Dickover, answering her screams, grappled with the invader and was stabbed in the left arm with a dagger. His wound was believed not serious and a physician said it should heal within two weeks.

JOURNAL MAN IS RELATIVE OF VICTIM

Erle R. Dickover, first secretary and charge d'affaires of the United States embassy in Tokyo who was stabbed early today in his home by a burglar, is a cousin of Jack W. Ellwanger of Santa Ana, managing editor of The Journal.

Dickover, who has been in the diplomatic service in Japan for more than 30 years, is a graduate of the University of California and a former resident of Santa Barbara. His father, Dr. John Dickover, lives in Ojai. He has a brother, Stanley, of Berkeley; a sister, Mrs. Roy Ferguson, of Glendale, and another sister, Grace, of South Pasadena.

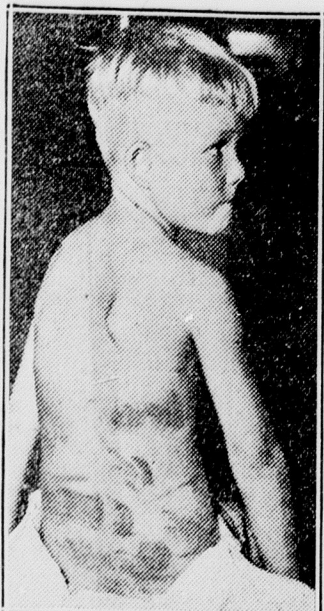

Huntington Park Installs Meters

Divided three-to-two on the question, the Huntington Park city council yesterday ordered installation of parking meters in the downtown section of that city.

Councilmen said that from 1,600 to 1,500 meters will be installed within six weeks for a 90-day trial. They will charge 5 cents per hour for parking.

Arguments for and against the meters were similar to those which developed here when the Santa Ana city council considered trying meters here and sent Councilman Ernest H. Layton to the Middle West and Texas to observe the machines in operation.

Six-year-old Robert Korowski strips to the waist in court in Detroit, Mich., to show proof of the beatings inflicted by his father, Alex, who admitted, Detroit police said, that he had flogged the child until neighbors called them in. The youngster, his back a mass of welts inflicted by a razor strap, was taken to a hospital for treatment. The father was jailed.

NOTED ARTIST TO TALK AT MUSEUM

Saturday Events Are to Be Resumed With New Picture Display

From interior decorating to oil paintings in Mexico, framed with Indian tin work . . . an international reputation as a fine artist. That's the story of Bertha T. Coler, prominent artist, who will speak Saturday at the Bowers Memorial museum in connection with a small exhibit of some of her works in the first of a fall series of "museum talks" announced today by Mrs. F. E. Coulter, curator.

Nationally Known

Mrs. Coler, arriving in New York 30 years ago to study art, abandoned the study of painting for interior decorating in the United States. She has since painted two small children through school and college. Her studio at Columbus, O., attracted national attention, and she finally retired from the decoration field to return to painting. She now hopes to specialize in portraiture.

She has just returned from a trip to the Orient, where she sketched in China, Japan, Manchoukuo, Korea and Hawaii, and plans to leave soon on another trip to Mexico.

Indian Art Display

Saturday, when she appears at the museum, she will speak on "Glamorous Mexico," touching on the hand processes used by Indians to produce the tin frames used on her works made there. An exhibit of the original drawings used in the portfolio "Decorative Art of the Southwest Indians" by Dorothy Smith Sides will be on display at the museum Oct. 3. Mrs. Sides will be honored by a reception following a museum program.

District Will Be Dissolved

Final steps for dissolving the oldest protection district in Orange county, the Newbert district, will be taken by the board of supervisors next week.

County Surveyor W. K. Hillyard yesterday presented the board with petitions signed by owners representing 11,678 acres of the 19,000 in the district, requesting dissolution of the district.

First moves for its dissolution were taken several weeks ago, but were halted when it was found that a number of signatures were improper, and that title was clouded in some instances.

The district was formed in 1912, in the area between Newport Beach and Talbert, for the purpose of building levees and drainage systems in the Santa Ana river bed.

Today in the same column appears his statement of aims in connection with the series. He has expressed his ideas in verse.—Editor.)

Landon Likened to Lincoln as Democrats Claim Credit for Increased Farm Prices

The Journal conducts this forum so that its readers may receive full and authoritative information upon the issues of the presidential campaign. The county Democratic campaign committee, and E. Z. McKinney are in charge of that party's contributions. Howard Irwin, head of the Republican county central committee, and Dr. W. E. Dixon are contributing their party's articles.—Editor's note.

By THE DEMOCRATS

Agriculture under the Roosevelt program for the aid of the farmer, in both raising the prices of his products and regulating better the over-production of farm products, has shown a marked improvement over the years preceding this administration. This holds true even in the matter of payroll for farm laborers.

Agriculture's 1936 payroll in the United States—the total wages of farm laborers, exclusive of family labor—will aggregate nearly $500,000,000, according to conservative estimates, based on federal reports of the pick in farm employment and increased wage scales.

Paying better wages and employing additional workers, almost in direct proportion to the improvement in farm income, the nation's farming industry has added from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 to its hired labor budget during the year, it is indicated.

Two factors have served to reduce the demand for farm labor, even with the gradual pick up in farm business, according to the federal department.

Labor Saving Devices
First, the depression forced considerable substitution of family labor for hired labor, due to a reversal of the normal migration from farm to city. And migration still continues forward, rather than cityward.

Second, the increasing use of labor-saving machinery (tractors and tractor equipment, two and four-row planters, two and four-row cultivators, small combines, etc.) has decreased the need for farm workers, although contributing to employment in manufacturing and industrial centers.

As a sidelight on this trend, stock market reports indicate that farm machinery stocks have advanced more than 133 per cent during the last two years, the greatest percentage gain recorded by any class of stock on the New York market during the same period.

Sharps and Flats From The Political Bandwagon

LOS ANGELES, (AP)—President Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith may be rival broadcasters the night of Oct. 1. The Democratic national committee announced it had purchased the hour hour at 9 p. m. That day for the broadcast of the President's address at Pittsburgh, to be carried by both WEAH-NBC and WABC-CBS.

It was also announced that a verbal request for time at the same 9 o'clock hour, but via the WJZ-NBC network, had been made by publicity associates for the former Governor Smith's talk from Carnegie Hall in New York, he to speak under sponsorship of the Independent Coalition of American Women.

94,000 NAMES ALREADY ON LENKE PETITIONS

LOS ANGELES, (AP)—A campaign for signatures to place Lenke presidential electors on the California November ballot was spurred by announcement that 94,000 of the necessary 118,000 names already have been obtained. Deadline for filing ballot petitions is Sept. 29. Frobin P. Smith, campaign director, said Los Angeles county furnished 80,000 signatures.

SCARCITY OF CARPENTERS IS FEARED

Builders Exchange Here
Tells Age Increase of Craftsmen

Will a carpenter ever become an extinct artisan in the United States?

He seemed today to be headed in that direction, judging from figures made public by the Orange County Builders exchange. There is an imminent shortage of carpenters because in recent years younger men have not been entering the business as rapidly as in the past.

That's the cause for wondering if carpenters are disappearing. The average age of building craftsmen has increased from 40 years and four months in 1930 to 46 years, four months in 1936. At that rate, in 1952 the average age will be 52, and there won't be very many.

Age Increasing

This possibility arose out of a far-fetched supposition today with the release of figures by Franklin E. Smith, secretary-manager of the Builders exchange, showing the number and ages of available building workers.

The total, including all workers in the construction field, ranges from 12.8 per cent between 10 and 24 years to 27.7 per cent from 35 to 44 and 5.2 per cent over 65 years.

Higher Wages

Census reports cause alarm among building men, when they show that building workers in the United States have decreased from more than 2,000,000 in 1930 to 1,250,000 in 1936. Death, occupational changes, and the slump in building have caused it.

The imminent shortage of building artisans, Smith said, would result in higher wages and higher building costs, an influx of untrained and poor labor, and mushroom development of pre-fabricated houses.

Reckless Driving Term Suspended

Found guilty of reckless driving as the result of an automobile accident, A. M. Price today had escaped a 30-day jail sentence through terms of a judgment rendered by Justice of the Peace Kenneth E. Morrison.

Justice Morrison sentenced Price to jail, with the sentence suspended provided he pay $5.50 to Mabel Woods, the complaining witness, and pay a $10 fine.

Established Credit

The Roosevelt New Dealers, with their brain trust, spent $32,600,000,000 with "experts" for saving the nation. Governor Landon in the same four years, used old-fashioned rules of efficiency and economy and kept every promise—in Kansas—that the New Dealers broke in Washington.

Where Roosevelt nearly ruined the credit of a nation, Landon established first class credit for a drought-stricken state that had not had a normal wheat crop in four years. Wisdom is not limited to universities. Common sense cannot be had for the asking. Theories that look the best often work the worst. And country boys can be found winning the biggest business in the world.

Lincoln's biographer, Carl Sandburg, writes:

"He was a slow man in important decisions, slow at getting started."

Those who deplore Governor Landon's slow campaign start might also consider that many a slow beginning brings the strongest ending. The epithets now being hurled at Governor Landon will make him more friends than enemies. Lincoln was the most gently abused president we ever had. Yet his virtues, founded on seven months of schooling, rank highest in our history.

If this nation wants a man, rather than a radio crooner; if our people prefer a producer to a poseur—they will do well to watch this man, Alf M. Landon. His career has been much like Lincoln's.

WOMEN SEEK TO CLEAR UP LIQUOR BY VOTE

SAN FRANCISCO, (AP)—A committee of Northern California women, headed by Gertrude Atherton, novelist, was organized yesterday to clean up the liquor situation in the state without resorting to a return to bone-dry prohibition. The committee will work for passage of proposition No. 3 on the November ballot and will oppose proposition No. 9. Proposition three provides for liquor control and liquor law enforcement, while No. 9 is a prohibition measure under the title of local option.

FAIL TO ACT ON STOP SIGNS

With Mayor Fred C. Rowland objecting to tentative listing of First street and Bristol street as through routes, the city council Monday night delayed action on resolutions establishing boulevard stops and other traffic regulations.

Six resolutions prepared by City Attorney Lew W. Blodgett were presented to the council, then withdrawn.

One of the tentative resolutions names streets which will be posted with boulevard stop signs on intersecting streets. In general, the main city thoroughfares, such as Main, Broadway, Fourth and Fifth streets are listed.

Other resolutions are to specify locations of loading, short-time parking, one- and two-hour parking, and passenger loading zones.

Officials Demur To Damage Action

Charging that a $100.55 damage action by Ed Coffman does not state sufficient evidence to constitute a cause of action, Justice of Peace Halsey I. Spence, Constable W. H. Skillman and P. J. Ford of Fullerton yesterday filed a demurrer to Coffman's suit in Santa Ana justice court.

They ask that the suit, filed after the superior court reversed an assertedly satisfied judgment for that amount against Coffman, be dismissed without permission for Coffman to amend his complaint. The original judgment was issued by Justice Spence.

Discovered She Had Two Husbands

Claiming that when she married him she was unaware that a first husband was still alive, Mrs. Ethel M. Bouldin yesterday brought suit against Homer E. Bouldin for an annulment of their marriage, performed Dec. 31, 1932, in Tijuana.

The plaintiff states in her complaint that she was married in 1930 to Leon Basset, from whom she was separated a year later. A short time after that Basset went to a hospital, where he was reported dying, and in December, 1931, she was told he had died.

After marrying Bouldin, Mrs. Bouldin says she learned her first husband still lived, and she immediately left her second husband. Later, in November, 1933, Basset died.

Adult School Program Mailed

Keep Skin Young by Massaging

By JACQUELINE HUNT
Here is a facial treatment that will help keep the muscles elastic and the tissues firm.

Cleanse the entire face and neck with cream or by washing. Rinse with warm water to which boric acid or some other mild antiseptic has been added. Hold this over the face to relax the facial muscles and soften the skin so it will absorb the oils more readily. Now apply softening cream liberally over the shoulders, neck and face, stroking upward with the fingers and palms of the hands.

Use Fingers
Now, using the fleshy tip of the middle finger of each hand stroke the forehead up from the top of the eyebrows to the hairline, making about 12 parallel strokes across the entire forehead. Next, place the first finger of each hand over an eyelid, the second finger under the lower lashes where lines and circles form. Stroke gently from the inner corners near the nose out to the temples, stop and press a second, then repeat.

Dip your fingertips in more cream and, using the second finger, circle each closed eye gently, beginning at the nose and circling outward over the eyelid, inward beneath the eye. After circling each eye 10 times, place the middle finger on the bridge of the nose and stroke downward on both sides, ending with a circular massage over the creases at the corners of the nostrils.

Upward Movements
Use the tips of all the fingers for massaging from the point of the chin upward to the area just in front of the ears. Stroke firmly, pressing and lifting the heavy muscle along the jawline as you go. Come back to the chin and using the fingers and palms of the hand stroke the entire face gently with an upward, slightly circular movement. Return to the chin again, and using a pinching movement, follow along the jawline, and then in upward rows until you have gone over the entire face.

Use a similar method to massage the neck, beginning low on the chest and working upward to the chin and jawline.

New Uses For Old Friends

By JUDITH WILSON
Here are a few more recipes which find new uses for the common vegetable and fruit:

Succotash
Cook 2 cups lima beans in just enough salted water to prevent sticking. When almost tender, drain off the water, add 2 cups fresh corn cut from the cob, 1 cup milk, 4 tablespoons butter and more salt and pepper for seasoning. Simmer slowly for 10 minutes or until the corn is tender. This makes four generous servings.

Baked Pears with Orange
Peel 4 large pears, cut in halves and cores. Place in a baking dish, add the juice of 3 oranges, enough honey to sweeten and 4 thin slices of unpeeled orange. Bake until tender—about 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with a garnish of whipped cream as dessert.

Peach Pie
Bake a lower pie crust and cool. Peel peaches, cut in wedges, and sprinkle with powdered sugar. When ready to serve, turn into the pie shell and cover with swirls of whipped cream.

DE MOLAY MOTHERS
De Molay Mothers will give a courtesy dinner and steak bake for their president, Friday evening when they gather for a 5:30 meal at the home of Mrs. Roy Horton, 315 Cypress street. All attending are asked to bring steaks.

THORN in the FLESH
By GLENN L. THORNE
All I know is what I read in the papers, but looks eventually we may have a park after all. City council has approved $50,000 more on the Santiago park project, in addition to the $83,000 for repairs on sidewalks.

I like outdoor hamburgers, same as you do! But Irvine park is too far away to ride a bicycle just to try a hamburger and besides the high cost of firewood makes necessary lots of material to cover up the taste of money. Jack Fisher park is a dandy place, but it seems every time I go there, everyone else has had the same idea at the same time. That's really a place where two's enough and three's a crowd.

So more power to the city council for going ahead with the Santiago creek project which will make 9625 days of work and give us a good start toward the park everyone seems to want.

Only objection, I'd rather put $83,000 on the park and $50,000 on the sidewalks. And speaking of sidewalks, if there's going to be any work done on 'em, let's have 'em lowered at street crossings so that the aged, lame, halt, and blind will be able to get up and down without having to carry stepladders and boxes.

KIBELS HONORED ON ANNIVERSARY

The 49th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kibel, 610 Bush street, was the occasion last night of a dinner party tendered them by many of their friends and neighbors.

Mr. and Mrs. Kibel were married in Somerset, Pa., in 1887, and moved to Santa Ana 28 years ago. The guests assembled at a long table set under the trees and decorated with deep red roses and a huge centerpiece of autumn fruits. After the delicious potluck meal had been served with the assistance of Mrs. Ralph Wilbur, Mrs. Henry Marris and Mrs. Alec Smith, they formed a group around the piano, singing old-time songs. Mrs. Marris and Mrs. Smith played the wedding march in duet form.

Those present were the honored guests, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kibel; their son Clark Kibel of Fullerton, with his wife and son Raymond; Mrs. Laura Ingram, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wilbur, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Marris and son Theodore, Mr. and Mrs. Alec Smith, Mrs. Donia Burke, Mrs. Lydia Robinson, Mrs. Goldie Vann, Helen Vann and Arnold Vann, Mrs. Louise Robertson, and Miss Helene Peterson.

BETHEL HAS INITIATION

In their first initiation meeting under the new officers, headed by Honored Queen Dorothy Carlson, the Misses Marjorie Shrode, Nancy Ann Reer, Margot Ann Rossetti, and Dorothy Eddy became members of Santa Ana Bethel of Job's Daughters last night at a session in the Masonic temple.

One of the outstanding features of the program was singing of one of the Bethel's songs by Mrs. Thomas Willits, accompanied by Miss Ruth Armstrong.

The dance committee announced a Halloween dance for October 30 in Veterans' hall; and a report was given of progress on the mountain cabin at Forest Home, the local Bethel being the only one in the United States to own such a thing. Mrs. William Dean, guardian, presented Bethel service pins to Charlotte Quiggle and Martha Horseman, and Margaret Abel and her committee served refreshments at the close. Betty Jo Willits is head of the refreshment committee for next meeting.

Justice of the Peace Kenneth Morrison was in Los Angeles yesterday, testifying in the trial of a Los Angeles man charged with bigamy, said to have been married here by Justice Morrison several years ago.

The two will spend the coming weekend at a house party being given by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Long at their cabin in Idyllwild.

Dr. Fred K. Haiber and Mrs. Haiber of 517 Orange avenue spent last week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Walberg of Pasadena, at San Clemente.

Denies Guilt on Assault Charge

Charged with striking Ramon Corona in the face during a fracas at a South Main street pool hall Sunday, F. E. Hardy, proprietor of the pool hall, today pleaded not guilty in Santa Ana justice court to an assault charge.

He will have a court trial Oct. 7 and is free on his own recognizance.

Club No. 11 will meet tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Franklin school on West Fourth street. C. L. Carlisle will be the speaker.

CLOWN HALL TO BE ERECTED

A wonderful house is soon to be erected here. It will be built of canvas and the room will be held skyward by big red and blue poles as large as trees in the woods. At the very top of one of these poles will be a flag bearing the words, "Clown Hall." It's the traveling home of the Cole Brothers' army of jesters.

Besides that which is made of canvas, there is still another "Clown Hall." This second home is located at the circus quarters in Rochester, Ind. Here it is that the funny chaps gather after the big show has completed its tour. They plan their grotesque costumes, rehearse a world of comicalities, rig up big wooden canons, airships and whatnot, and to think out new frolics and jokes of every kind.

Could the thousands upon thousands of children who laugh with these Merry Andrews from April until November but creep up to the windows of the snow covered "Hall" in Rochester on a December day and peek inside. They would surely think that they had discovered old Santa's work shop. For they would see big and little men busily engaged making all sorts of gay carts and wagons, queer looking guns that shoot nothing more dangerous than water, and no end of laughable masques and faces. And nearby, in big buildings frescoed with icicles but kept very warm within, they would catch glimpses of spotted ponies and Shetlands, blinking monkeys, knowing dogs, shaggy bears and even baby elephants going round and round in big, broad rings or mounted on stages all very attentive to their score of trainers and making ready for the long journey which always begins in the springtime.

This tour has now begun and clowns and animals and all the rest of the wonders of Spangleland will be here when the circus comes to Santa Ana Monday, Oct. 5, for performances at 2 and 8 p. m. An immense street parade will be seen on the downtown streets at 11 a. m.

POULTRY STOLEN
Theft of 14 chickens valued at $20, from A. P. Parra, Hanson and Ball roads, was being investigated by sheriff's officers today. The theft occurred Saturday night, Parra said, as he reported it yesterday.

URUGUAY SPLITS WITH SPAIN

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay. (AP)—Uruguay, angered by the reported execution of three sisters of a Uruguayan diplomat in Madrid, severed relations with Spain yesterday.

The diplomatic break was announced following a cabinet meeting which considered dispatches describing the alleged killing of Dolores, Consuelo and Maria Aguilar, sisters of Montevideo's consul in the Spanish capital.

The reported killings, government sources held, demonstrated the Madrid administration could not control the actions of its militia. Reports to the foreign ministry stated the sisters were executed by government militia men.

Be Examined Twice Yearly

By CLAUD CHRISMAN, M.D.

The sick man consults his physician, places himself under his care and takes his advice with benefit. That is as it should be and in the past has constituted by far the largest part of a physician's practice. But time and experience have proven that the well man should consult his physician, take his advice and so often escape the loss of time and discomfort of being a sick man.

The time for these examinations is from the time of birth to old age, but the greatest necessity is from the age of 25 to 60. This is when most chronic diseases make their first appearance. These diseases are usually slow and sneaking. At first they show no discomfort and the patient is apparently well.

Defects Found

During the examinations of the young men between 20 and 30 for entrance into the World war, more than half proved to have some defect, and in 291 per 1,000, defects were so serious as to render them unfit for military service. Nearly 40 per cent of the defects were mechanical and correctable.

The person to make these examinations is not a specialist, but your family physician who knows you, your family, your surroundings, your work, your worries and, last but not least, your peculiarities.

Overhauling Necessary

The important thing is the discovery of any slight change from the normal. To recognize any hidden infection before it becomes severe, to advise you if any part of your daily routine is not best for your continued good health or how and why to change.

You send your automobile to the garage for examinations and adjustment. You have your heating plant overhauled every year, but you go on for years with no inspection or overhauling of your own vital machine. After your physician has tested you out and announced that your machinery is working 100 per cent you will think it all well worth while. Or if he says such and such is not up to par but a little adjustment here and there will correct your trouble, your mind will be at rest. Have this examination twice a year. Go because you are well, and want to remain so.

LEGIONNAIRES TRAFFIC COPS

DIXON, Ill. (AP)—Approximately 150 members of the local American Legion post will be sworn in as special traffic police, Cal D. Tyler, city commissioner, announced, and given power to arrest violators.

Tyler said, "The city council has approved the plan, and I expect to have it operating by the end of the week."

Disregard of ordinances requiring full stops before entering arterial streets, Tyler said, has

Pigskin Days Are Here Again

Football season is officially here, and this week all Smiling Associated Dealers are giving out copies of Associated's 1936 schedule book, a 32-page guide to Pacific coast football. One of the first copies off the press went to Coach Bill Spaulding of U. C. L. A. (left). Here he is, looking it over with Frank Bull, one of Associated's staff of sportscasters who soon will be on the air broadcasting major Pacific coast games.

Impounding of Drunk Drivers' Cars Is Urged

SAN FRANCISCO.—The California Safety Council has recommended that the state enact legislation making it compulsory to impound automobiles owned by drivers who are arrested for driving while intoxicated.

The recommendation asks passage of a law requiring that automobiles driven under these circumstances be held for a minimum of three months for the first offense.

AUTO RECOVERED

An automobile belonging to Tony Alves, Buena Park, reported stolen in Bellflower Sept. 19, was recovered by Los Angeles sheriff's officers yesterday. The Norwalk substation reported to the sheriff's office here.

NEVER MISSED A SUNDAY!

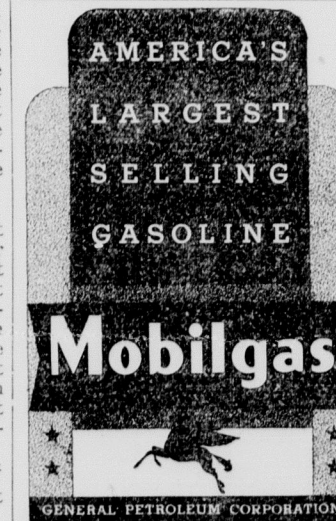

Polished Only Car 27 Years

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Every Sunday morning for 27 years—except three days when he was sick—Fred W. Langbein has spent three hours polishing his first and only car.

That makes about half a year of solid polishing, if you put it all together. Langbein, who is a tailor, bought the car (a Ford) in 1909 and paid $895 for it. He has put nearly 600,000 miles on four speedometers.

"They used to yell 'get a horse' at me," Langbein said. "They don't say that much any more."

Four Years of Bank History

WITH the American Bankers association meeting now in San Francisco, it is interesting to turn the record back four years to the convention of the bankers in Los Angeles in the midst of another political campaign.

How different it was in 1932! The bankers were sleepless at night, mourning over the loans they were forced to call, and afflicted by visions of depositors storming at their doors.

Yet they passed a series of resolutions that now sound weird. One solemnly noted that business improvement was under way; another branded bank deposit insurance as unworkable; another deplored the increase in the maximum amount of a postal savings account; another frowned on a proposal to make commercial banks give up their security business, and another demanded a reduction in government borrowing and taxation.

But the bankers were not the only blind groups in the country.

The crisis came in March, 1933, and scarcely a bank was doing business when a new president took the oath of office. Almost immediately a series of reform and relief measures were started. Banks were divorced from the business of stock jobbing; the federal reserve was strengthened; extensive loans were made to weak banks, enabling them to meet the demands of their depositors, and—perhaps the most potent of all—deposits were insured.

All these measures combined to one dominant purpose—the creation of public confidence in banks. So well have they succeeded, that there has not been a single run on any of the 16,000 banks now doing business, although their solvency has been attacked quite recently in the heat of partisan politics.

The bankers meeting in San Francisco may not approve of some of the New Deal reforms. But at least they can go home after the convention is over without being afraid that their institutions have been closed by a run of depositors.

Local speaker says Nazi philosophy is spreading in the United States. He can't be thinking about Mr. Hearst, can he?

A Sane Farm Program

PROMISING cash benefit and conservation payments to farmers, Governor Landon in his Des Moines address yesterday took full advantage of the generally acknowledged weaknesses in the administration's program of artificial scarcity.

The Kansan's proposal would secure a fair price for farm products to farmers through the payment of cash benefits on domestically consumed portions of the crop. This simply means that the producer will get paid for raising what we need—not for not growing the things we think we don't need.

The G. O. P. program is more sensible than the present system because it not only helps the farmer, but it also safeguards the consumer against excessively high food prices resulting from a combination of artificial and natural scarcity—such as we are suffering in some crops at present.

A G-Man's Opinion

COMING at a time when crime and racketeering fill the police records, a hard-hitting statement from J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, goes straight to the bull's-eye. Mr. Hoover, speaking to the Holy Name Society in New York, blames a large part of present crime condition on crooked lawyers, doctors, political ward heelers, renegade politicians and complaisant district attorneys. Says he:

"There are conditions of unutterable corruption which exist in too many of our cities and which deserve more of an overhauling than a mere occasional Grand Jury whitewashing."

The G-man boss scores a perfect hit with this statement. There is nothing more encouraging to professional crime than the complacency or corruption of officials who are supposed to protect the public. Mr. Hoover is on the inside—and he knows.

$50,000 for a City Park

IN APPROVING a $50,000 WPA project for landscaping and improving the Santiago creek park site, the city council has done a wise thing. There has long been a need and a demand in Santa Ana for a large, beautiful city park. This $50,000 program should make it at last possible to get one.

A good idea of what the park will look like when completed can be obtained by visiting the new Orange city park one-half mile up the creek bottom. The Orange park was developed from the same rough kind of terrain into a little gem of greenery and civic usefulness with its play courts, picnic accommodations and swimming pool.

If our city dads get a good park for the $50,000, the money will be well-spent.

Museum Open Sundays

THE BOWERS Memorial museum may soon be open to the public gaze on Sundays. City Council has just recommended that the museum board take this step.

As it is now—with the doors closed on Sundays—hundreds of working men are unable to take their families to enjoy the interesting and educational exhibits because they have to be on their jobs during week-days when the building is open.

The museum was built for public service. It will serve more people if it is opened on Sundays.

the open air artist colony. A colony, beretted and long haired as will be found in those tiny lanes veining off from the Place du Tertre in Montmartre.

The colony lounges around on camp chairs, on door steps and cellar doors with their creative efforts spread before them. Here and there a professional model is standing statue-like before an easel. Possible patrons as well as the curious ciot everywhere and are welcome.

These is every style of painting, water color and pastels, even black and white drawings and sketches, landscapes, seascapes, nudes, genre paintings and country lanes. But most of the salable efforts are portrait sketches done in a moment and sold for as little as a dime.

One Edwin Markham looking patriarch told me that during hot summer he averaged $3 a week. "That is enough," he said complacently. "For my needs down here." Still another told me he had made $11 in a week—which so far as I knew was top for the colony.

I wangled an extra heart skip in crashing suddenly upon this in the O. Henry story, "Afternoon Miracle":

"Alviny, are you right happy?" "I'm reading the home paper, Ma. What do you think, that the low-headed Matilda Price got the most votes in the News for the prettiest girl in Galli-polees?"

More than likely sheer coincidence, but there was a Matilda Price in our town. Anyway it was comforting that as far back as that O. Henry knew the town's correct pronunciation.

It has struck me frequently that one of Manhattan's most polite and sequestered stretches is Morningside Drive. And what a pretty name! There is a hush and the scent of flowers yet it's hard by one of the noisiest sections. Nicholas Murray Butler's residence is there, overlooking in noble serenity, Harlem. And while strolling the area there floated out the window the strains of a pianist who had dipped back. He or she was softly playing those old instrumental favorites: Nights of Gladness, Laeas and Graces, and Narcissus. And for no reason at all I thought of a scene between Florence Vidor and Menjou in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." And further along with a wince I became bemused with a stark nostalgia for one of those old farm suppers, red table cloth, lamp and the hound twitching on the kitchen porch.

Sartorial secret: A bow tie more than any other male adornment snips years off an older's looks. I saw a man today that reveals himself in Who's Who as 62. With his polka dotted bow tie he might easily be taken for 40.

It's interesting to drop into one of those pink lit dance halls along Broadway and permit the argus-eyed hostess, after looking you over, to select the dancing partner she imagines you will prefer. The choice for me the other afternoon was one of those babes with straight hair drawn from a severe middle part and with chandeliers hanging from the ears. One almost expected the butler to announce: The Duchess of Zampf. She was indeed a stately queen with raven colored locks swathed in green. As a matter of fact I like them fluffy and blonde.

And as I lumbered leaden-footed in the wake of her dainty treadings, I wondered just how to break the conversational ice in the two-minute period. She made it easy with: "I like guys like you who don't talk." And by the time I pip-squeaked a "Yes, nam," the dance was over and she dropped me like a hot potato and walked stiffly away.

We were recalling a roly-poly grouch in our town called "Doc." He came to Kerr's drug store nightly to smoke his after supper cigar. He disliked long speeches, and one night when a loafer started one "Doc" made for the door with: "Mail us the rest!" That sort of advice we'd like to give the radio political speakers lately.

Bright Moments

Mr. Justice Gould, one of Great Britain's very able barristers of the early 19th century, was trying a case in York. A slow, deliberate speaker, he had proceeded about two hours when he happened to glance at the jury box.

He was amazed to find only 11 men therein. "Here are only 11 jurymen in the box. Where is the 12th," he asked of the foreman. "Please you, my lord," the man replied, "he has gone away about some business but has left his verdict with me."

CALLS ON G. O. P. WOMEN

To the Editor: The Republican men are organizing campaign clubs that they may be instrumental in swinging the California pendulum from pro-Roosevelt to pro-Landon. What about the women, isn't it time for us to fall in line?

We are facing a crisis far greater than that of Lincoln's time. It is a question of either remaining loyal to our American ideals and principles as we have them embodied in the constitution, or being gradually switched into accepting the principles of European Fascism and Communism under the name of the New Deal. It is high time that we women do our share in defeating federal centralization and the ambition of dictatorship of F. D. R. in Washington, D. C.

It is to be hoped that our patriotic women of Santa Ana will be interested in organizing a Republican Women's club for the purpose of stimulating our Republican campaign work. Please, phone to the Republican headquarters about setting a date for a meeting.

We dislike hearing members of congress make long, statistical speeches on the taxation problem. We don't mind them taxing our pay, but we hate to have them tax our patience.

NEWS FLASH

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 23. Believed to be on a secret mission, a posse of grim, determined political leaders left here quietly Saturday night. From unofficial sources it was learned that they were speeding to an unnamed city in the middle west, where a campaign issue was reported seen last week. The posse has orders to bring it back to Washington dead or alive.

The old black blackboard has been doomed to go the way of the horse and buggy if experiments carried out in a Toledo, O., grade school continue to show such marvelous results. There the blackboards are made of green glass. Teachers have found that a "blackboard" made of green glass is more restful to the eye and is easier to clean. For the best writing, yellow chalk is used in writing on these boards.

One Man's Opinion

By Duncan Ellsworth Clark

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Here is an informative, analytical daily feature on current topics. The opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily the same as those held by The Journal.

Parties and Policies Must Meet Our Day

PARTIES and policies must adjust themselves to the present-day demands. There is something silly in trying to square men's actions now with what men did a century ago. Why try to be a Jeffersonian Democrat or a Hamiltonian Republican when both those venerable gentlemen have been gone these hundred years and more? "New occasions teach new duties," now as always. Jefferson, of all men, insisted that institutions must constantly shift to meet the demands made upon them.

This does not mean that old truths must be discarded. Nor that old principles, tried and proved through years of human effort, must be thrown aside. Such basic principles are always good. Fundamental principles of human relationships do not change significantly. Truth carries on from generation to generation, and what brilliant and honest men have said in ages gone are still true so far as we can grasp them.

But the circumstances which govern the application of basic principles may change. Indeed, they have changed very much, and are changing still more. Courageous men meet the challenge of their own day unafraid. Fearful demagogues flounder, look back to the "good old days" for solace and safety. They fear the darkness in front of them more

Skinny Skribbles

Around and About Town

With C. F. (Skinny) SKIRVIN

Over to Long Beach for the week-end, and I'm not sure which end—whether it was my feet or my head. It's a nice place to rest, if the thugs let you alone. They were fairly active Saturday night, but the score is still in Los Angeles' favor. Long Beach, in case you do not know it, is the place made famous by the Bixby philanthropies, the preponderance of former Iowans, Herbert Clark's municipal band, apartment houses, ocean front forums and tango games. Why, there was a fellow playing at one of the tables on the pike the other evening, and was so interested in the game he didn't pay any attention to anyone until the cops tapped him on the shoulder and suggested that he return to some little town in Nebraska where the people wanted about $4000 he took away with him which belonged to the taxpayers.

Now let's see. Oh, yes, it's tomorrow night. You can register as late as midnight, but who wants to remain up until that hour to get his or her name on the registration books. You don't have to. Attend to it sometime tomorrow. Thursday, Sept. 24, midnight is the last hour you can register.

There is more grafting going on. The California Citigraph hands me a "Lemon-Orchard." Now whoever heard of such a gold-dredging? Editor Street allays an uneasiness on my part about a cluster of lemons appearing on the frontispiece of an issue of the Citigraph, and says the recent price of lemons should entitle the display to welcome and complimentary reception. Whenever anyone offers me a lemon I always accept it on the same terms as Greeks bearing gifts. I use lemons frequently, but just a fringe of lemon as it floats serenely and contentedly on top of a glass, supported by Kentucky authority and endorsed by millions.

Carl Edgar has added to the Greyhound family, but they are pups. Ten of 'em. The family can't vote, but it's registered. When feeding time comes the pups are served in rotation, and not in seniority. Five pups go right up to the family table, and five of 'em are the goat's guests. Then vice versa. You know vice versa, don't you? Like Flannigan's hand can't off again, on again.

About the time we are able to evaluate a man's worth to his community, about the time we begin to esteem his citizenship and fellowship, some incident in his life develops which calls for a cancellation of his identification and he packs up his troubles in the old kit bag and travels to another location. That's what Claude McDowell is doing. He's going to San Francisco to take charge of the Kirkpatrick bakeshop in that city and Oakland. Years ago he was in the Kirkpatrick organization. Evidently he was an effective and promising part of the concern as Mr. Kirkpatrick, after nine intervening years, again requests his personal appearance. With his good wife he goes north, carrying with him the affection of scores of friends, and best wishes of business men with whom he has had contact.

According to the United States Golf Association the first record of the game in this country appeared in an advertisement in the Georgia Gazette of Sept. 22, 1796. The advertisement announced the Savannah Golf club's anniversary celebration in the Merchants' and Planters' Coffee House.

I wish I knew everybody who knows me. It would smooth out some of the rougher places, diminishing a lot of detours, and lighten the day's labor. You see, when someone tells me a story, and I talk to the party like I have known him or her intimately, when I couldn't tell you their names if I was going to get a Major Bowes award for something, then I have to go to some one I know to tell me who the party is I'm talking to that I do not know. So if you want to come right up to me and say, you little shrimp, my name is So and So, and I don't know you, the possibilities are that you will be right. You see, I don't know everybody in town and you think I do. That is, not by name.

It don't take so much to give me a case of the jitters. Just a boy and a bicycle. I've danced a Highland fling trying to find out which way one of those bikes with a boy on top was going to go, and before he could make up his mind I had a nervous breakdown. For a time I tried to go the way he wasn't going, then I tried to go with him, and by the time both of us made up our mind neither one of us knew where we were going. That's one reason why I favor the sidewalks for the exclusive use of pedestrians, but I rather take a chance than to have one of the "kids" run over by an automobile.
